

Ronald I. Cohen, Psy.D
Individual, Marital and Family Psychotherapy
NYS Certified Psychologist

333 East Shore Road
Manhasset, NY 11030
(516) 487-5213

60 Vanderveer Court
Rockville Centre, NY 11570
(516) 536-6161

31 May 2022

Assessment Report

Re: Tom Desousa Sr.

ICD 10: DX: F43.10

Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Mr. Tom Desousa Sr. has been seen in psychotherapeutic treatment since 28 March 2022. Sessions take place weekly as well as crisis telephone calls when the patient has become agitated.

Mr. Desousa is extremely cooperative, shares readily and is willing to express himself in an honest and open manner. The patient has experienced ongoing trauma and repeated exposure to overwhelming noise with respect to a neighbor's automotive vehicle (as stated by the patient). The prolonged psychological distress has produced increasing guardedness, panic reactions, loss of sleep and pervasive distrust. Tom has become more withdrawn and at times hypervigilant with an exaggerated startle response. At work, there are periods of poor concentration and a loss of professional focus. This has resulted in a generalized and pervasive agitation of emotions with family and friends. The patient has become more aloof and insulated from peers and his children.

Mr. DeSousa's chronic cardiovascular disease has been consistently affected by the ongoing overwhelming stress related to the volatile relation with his neighbor. The overpowering noise has triggered numerous episodes of dizziness and extreme chest pains which has resulted in visits to the emergency room of a hospital. The history of congestive heart failure and chronic atrial fibrillation has been compromised by the persistent trauma he has experienced representing a grave health risk to Mr. Desousa. A close temporal association between the trauma and pathological medical reaction has been demonstrated with a regular pattern.

Treatment has focused upon cognitive behavioral tools to reduce overwhelming anxiety and enhanced concentration skills. Self-relaxation solutions are being implemented as well as improving the ability to remain professionally productive. Mr. Desousa remains extremely motivated and open to attempting therapeutic changes. Thank you for your cooperation.

Ronald I. Cohen, Psy.D.
NYS Licensed Psychologist #007226